“ Alan was my cousin. My grandmother was Ida Vickers Simpson, Margaret's sister. When Alan came to visit us in Alabama, we played his favorite game, Aggravation. He entertained us all with his guitar playing. The cousins would have a "hoot-nanny" on hot, sultry Southern nights in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, and Alan would sing "I want to hold your hand," by the Beatles. He loved my grandfather, "Simp," and seemed to love all of us. We thought he was great. I was pleased to hear he was living semi-independently, and I know Aunt Margaret and Uncle Morton devoted much time and energy to help others like Alan. His was a vivacious and lovely spirit. I know he will be missed. I am proud of Alan.

“ Alan and my wife -- Patricia Vickers Head -- are first cousins. He was always a favorite with her, and with everyone who knew him. Some, like Alan, are placed on this earth for a special purpose. In his case, to teach us how to love others.

We will miss him, but I'm sure God is glad to have him home.

Our deepest sympathy and love to Aunt Margaret on this sad occasion.

“ Alan was the best friend of my uncle, Monty Latham. I fondly remember their Saturday night spaghetti dinners and games. My sister and I used to love to watch them sing to their records. Alan was such a sweet person, and I am thankful that he led such a fulfilling life.
