“ My father served with the Army in Vietnam during the Tet. Was Randy's nickname "Tex"? Looking through some old pictures I found a person "Tex" Brimberry... not sure if its him?

“ I knew Randy in the early 60s, along with Ronnie Rodgers, Jimmy Tabb, and Don Fowler. I remember the record they had called "Joan" and flipside was "Pink Scarf". We used to crash at Geraldines house and sleep on the floor. I left Albany over 20 years ago, but I still remember the good old days with Randy, he was a sweetheart. RIP baby boy.

Randy was hands down the best backbeat drummer I've ever had the honor of jamming with... we did a few gigs together years ago. Randy kept the scene upbeat, a positive environment that could bring out the best performance of each individual he was playing with... Randy pumped ya up and made you want to give the music everything ya had to achieve the most grandeur of perfection possible. Rest In Peace my friend, you are a Ringo

“ One of the first people I met upon arriving to Albany in '92. Many great memories, and mostly surrounded by music. Even when moving away, we talked about him and his love of life and people. A great loss, and yet a new beginning amongst his many mentors he can now make music with all the time. 💕

“ I first met Randy at Albany Studio in June, 2019. He was playing with Terry Stubbs and Danny Washburn in a local band called "Hardpack". I was in town to record a new song "Check the Box" for my "Razor Willie 'N Stitches" CD.
Terry is my sessions bass player.
I asked Terry to invite Randy and Danny (with Adrian Otero) we became a band for a week.
Randy brought a slow steady laid back style to the production. He was solid in structure but mellow in technique.
He played effortlessly! Once I saw him playing without sticks. He was tapping with his hands around my Hayman drum kit. He was the only drummer I ever hired to play on one of my songs.
Randy was upbeat, positive and constantly fueling the fire. He made everyone feel good about themselves and how they were performing.
My heart is saddened with the thought that he is gone. God Bless You Randy.
I'm sure u are tickled 2B in heaven. Say hi to Jesus for me. RIP Brother.
