

Jeffrey Brown

December 9, 1960 - November 25, 2025

Jeffrey Brown was born in Syracuse, NY in 1960. He was preceded in death by his son, Aaron, and his mother, Dottie. He is survived by his parents, Hank and Diane; brother, Ken; sister, Patti; and his ex-wife, Cheri. He spent many years as a party chief, surveying for new construction in Northern Virginia. He took pride in being able to say he had a hand in many housing developments and mini malls throughout the area.

Jeff was a loving and devoted father to Aaron. He loved dogs, music by the Grateful Dead and Jimmy Buffett, and working with his hands. His joy at making and setting off fireworks made us wonder how he kept all his fingers. His collection of power tools was extensive, though it was never a true home repair project unless there were at least three trips to the hardware store. He moved south to avoid the winter weather in Northern Virginia. He dreamed of becoming a gentleman farmer with a houseful of dogs in his southern retirement. Sadly, that dream never came to pass due to poor health. He had a generous soul and always helped his friends when he could.

“ From Hank Brown (father)

When Jeff was 6, we were going to visit my brother. I took a shortcut through a housing development and it took many turns. Jeff asked where were we going. I told him, to visit Uncle Chuck and Jeff asked, "Did he move?"

“ I remember meeting Mr. Brown at one of house shows he hosted for local bands. He was very warm and friendly, a sweet soul considering the loss in his life. I am very sad to hear of his passing, but he is with his beloved son again.

“ Jeff was my first Party Chief and I learned so much from him. I remember telling him I passed my L.S.I.T. and how excited he was to hear the news. He was such a great mentor and a genuine great guy. I am going to miss you my friend and I hope to see you wearing that army green jacket while driving your blue Chevy pick up... FYI I'm the one that put the dent in it.
