“ I grew up with Stan, friends from grade school through Merry Acres Junior High and Albany High School. And over that time and the years since, Stan had the most infectious smile and laugh.

Stan "The Man", you were the big lug who lost his balance during some grade school shenanigans at recess and fell, squashing me like a bug-- resulting in the most luxurious polka-dotted goose egg ever recorded on a noggin at Palmyra Elementary.

While I still thought girls were something infectious that penicillin could cure, you were crazy about 'em. You were among the first of us to embrace rock & roll, too. In fifth grade, you went wild over Chubby Checker and his legendary, "The Twist" and my back hurts just thinking of your exertions. And in the sixth it was The Beatles! It also gave you the perfect excuse to grab a girl by the hand.

At Merry Acres you beat me out of qualifying in track for the hundred yard dash -- you ran knock-kneed and those flying feet of yours were such a menace kicking out to the either side, I couldn't get around you! And throughout the time we were growing up, you were just a champ of a guy.

I remember dropping by to see you after the stroke some years ago. Yes, you needed a personal caregiver and aid in walking. And yes, as I recall you couldn't say much at all. But that same smile would appear and laugh erupt when I brought up something or someone from long ago.

Rest easy, my friend, and know we'll never forget you, Stan.
