“ I am very glad that our relationship was much stronger as we both grew older and wiser. I still miss our weekly chats, so I annoy Mom with twice the calls. Your son.

“ You will always be loved and missed. I have some precious memories of our family. I am so glad you had Linda to love you and be with you through your journeys end. I love you.

“ There are many hills and valleys along life's way, and while we may not always agree, at least at the end if we come together on a plateau, all is not lost. It is best to remember the good times. May you rest in peace. I love you.

“ My memory talked to me yesterday as I read of Billy's death in the paper. Some sixty years ago on Third Avenue, we played in that neighborhood, climbing trees, riding bikes and all the chil-like things children do. We went all the way through school together connected by those early childhood memories. In recent years it was that same connection we would stop and visit in passing. I will miss seeing him. With warm memories. Sandra Holloway Hancock
